

Hauck Marketing — Creative Brief

The C3 Growth System for Local Service Businesses

Audience for this brief: owners of local home- & service-based businesses (window installers, HVAC, roofing, plumbing, electrical, remodeling, landscaping, etc.). This document defines who we're talking to, what we promise, why they should believe us, and the language/angles to use in ads, the website, and sales calls. Reference client: Willis Windows (Metro Detroit window installation/replacement).

What Are We Promising?

Promise Statement

"Stop leaking the leads you already paid for. We install a leakproof growth system that catches every lead, converts more of them into booked jobs, and turns finished jobs into your next ones — all inside one app with your name on it."

Promise Description

This promise reframes the owner's real problem. They don't have a lead quantity problem — they have a leak problem. Calls go unanswered, web leads sit for hours, quotes never get followed up, happy customers never leave a review, and past customers are never asked for the next job. Each of those is a leak, and each one is money they already spent to generate.

Hauck Marketing closes the loop. We build the owner a fully custom business app — their Command Center — that runs the entire customer journey: an AI agent suite answers calls and messages 24/7, automated follow-ups chase every lead through to a booked appointment, and reputation + reactivation systems compound each completed job into reviews and repeat work. The owner stops being the bottleneck, stops losing leads to slow response, and watches their cost-per-job fall over time instead of climbing.

The promise is completeness and reliability: every lead caught, converted, and compounded — automatically, in one place.

The Problem

The local service owner is drowning, and the leaks are invisible because they show up as nothing — the call that wasn't returned, the form that wasn't answered, the quote that went cold.

- They're on a ladder, under a sink, or driving between jobs when the phone rings — so it goes to voicemail, and the caller dials the next company on the list.
- A web lead comes in at 8 PM. They see it the next afternoon. The lead already booked someone else.
- They run Facebook ads, leads come in, but half never get a real follow-up because there's no system — just sticky notes and a memory that's already full.
- They send a quote and... silence. No structured follow-up. The job quietly dies.
- They do great work, but their Google profile has 11 reviews and the competitor down the road has 240.
- Hundreds of past customers sit in a phone contact list, never contacted again, even though re-selling them is the cheapest job they'll ever win.
- Every "solution" they've tried is another disconnected tool — a scheduler here, a CRM there, a chat widget that nobody monitors — none of it talking to each other.

The result: they're spending on ads to generate demand and then leaking most of it out the back. They feel busy but not in control, and growth feels like working more hours rather than running a better machine.

The Solution

Picture the owner's business running itself in the background while they're on the job.

A lead fills out the Facebook form at 8 PM. Within seconds, the AI agent suite is already in conversation — texting, qualifying, and offering appointment times. The phone rings during a job; the Voice Reception Agent answers in the owner's place, qualifies the caller, and books them straight onto the calendar. A web visitor starts a chat and closes the tab; the conversation continues by text so it never dies. Every booked job flows through automated reminders and confirmations so fewer no-show. The quote goes out with native e-signature inside the app. The job gets done, the owner taps one button, and a review sequence fires automatically. Months later, the Lead Reactivation Agent quietly re-books that same customer for their next project.

All of it lives in one place — "[Their Business] Command Center" — synced across mobile and desktop, with a single inbox for calls, texts, Facebook, Instagram, and Google messages, plus a reporting dashboard that shows exactly what every ad dollar produced.

This is the C3 Growth System: Capture → Convert → Compound. Not "more leads." A closed loop where nothing leaks, the owner stops being the bottleneck, and each finished job makes the next one cheaper to win.

Sales Argument

Are you ready to stop losing the customers you've already paid to reach?

Here's the uncomfortable truth most contractors never see on a spreadsheet: the biggest hole in your business isn't your marketing budget — it's the leads slipping out the back while you're busy doing the actual work. The missed call you'll never know about. The web lead that sat overnight and booked your competitor. The quote you sent that nobody followed up on. The five-star customer who would've left a glowing review if anyone had asked. The past client who'd happily buy again if they ever heard from you.

You don't need to be louder. You need to be leakproof.

Most agencies sell you "more leads." That's a price war you can't win, and it doesn't fix the real problem — it just pours more water into a leaking bucket. We do the opposite. We seal every hole in the bucket first.

We install your Command Center — a custom app that becomes the operating system for your whole business — and stock it with an AI agent suite that works the way you can't: instantly, 24/7, and without ever forgetting to follow up. Calls get answered. Leads get worked in seconds, not hours. Quotes get chased. Reviews get generated on autopilot. Past customers get reactivated. And you get a single dashboard showing what's actually working.

The owners who win in the next few years won't be the ones who spend the most on ads. They'll be the ones whose response is instant, whose follow-up never quits, and whose reputation compounds while they sleep. That's a system, not a hustle — and it's exactly what we build.

You stay in the field doing what you're great at. The machine handles everything between "interested" and "paid," and then turns "paid" into the next job. Stop leaking. Start compounding.

Reasons To Believe

(All figures paraphrased from the cited industry research; use as proof points in ads, the site, and on calls. Verify currency before any contractual claim.)

- Speed wins the job, and almost nobody is fast. The landmark MIT/InsideSales study (via Harvard Business Review) found that contacting a lead within five minutes makes them roughly 21× more likely to qualify than waiting 30 minutes. Yet recent 2025–2026 benchmark studies put the average business response time at well over a day, with only about one in four companies answering within five minutes. The first responder typically wins — studies repeatedly show ~78% of customers buy from whoever responds first. (Sources: MIT/InsideSales via HBR; Optifai; Verse; Apten 2026.)

- Most calls to small businesses are never answered. A widely cited analysis found that small businesses answer only about 38% of inbound calls — roughly 62% go unanswered. In home services specifically, a large share of calls go to voicemail, especially after hours. (Sources: 411 Locals; multiple 2026 missed-call studies.)
- A missed call is usually a lost customer — permanently. About 85% of callers won't call back if they don't reach you, and most call a competitor instead. Around 80% of people who hit voicemail don't leave a message, so the owner never even knows the lead existed. (Sources: PATLive; Aircall; multiple 2025–2026 studies.)
- Phone leads are the most valuable leads. Phone calls convert at an estimated 10–15× the rate of web-form leads (BIA/Kelsey), and in home services the average missed call is worth roughly $1,200+ in lost work. Typical small businesses are estimated to lose on the order of $120K+ per year to missed calls. (Sources: BIA/Kelsey; multiple 2026 analyses.)
- After-hours demand is real and goes uncaptured. A large share of inquiries arrive outside business hours, and businesses with 24/7 response capability have been shown to convert at materially higher rates than 9-to-5 operations — making an always-on AI agent a direct revenue lever. (Sources: Drift; multiple 2025–2026 studies.)
- Reviews now decide who gets the call. Around 97–98% of consumers read reviews before choosing a local business, and ~81–83% use Google to do it. In 2026, roughly 68% of consumers say they'll only use a business with 4+ stars (up from ~55% the prior year), and recency matters — most consumers only trust recent reviews. (Sources: BrightLocal 2026 LCRS; SocialPilot; Sixth City.)
- Every review is a discovery and conversion engine. Birdeye's analysis found that each additional Google review correlated with roughly 80 more website visits, 63 direction requests, and 16 phone calls per year — meaning a review-generation system feeds both rankings and revenue. (Source: Birdeye 2025.)
- Repeat business is the cheapest growth there is. Acquiring a new customer is consistently found to cost 5–25× more than keeping an existing one. The odds of selling to an existing customer are ~60–70%, versus ~5–20% for a cold prospect, and repeat customers tend to spend more. A 5% lift in retention has been tied to 25–95% higher profit (Bain). This is the math behind "Compound." (Sources: HBR; Bain & Company; Invesp.)

- Disconnected tools are the norm — and the opportunity. Most local businesses run a patchwork of scheduling, CRM, chat, and invoicing tools that don't talk to each other, which is exactly where leaks happen. A single synced system is the differentiator. (Positioning insight; supported by the operational fragmentation documented across the studies above.)
-

All Customer Avatars

1. The Overworked Owner-Operator (Home Improvement / Exterior) — window, roofing, siding, gutter, and remodeling owners running Meta ads, doing the estimates themselves, and losing leads while they're on-site. (Primary avatar — mirrors Willis Windows.)
 2. The Trades Operator (HVAC / Plumbing / Electrical) — high call volume, high job value, urgent customers, and a phone that constantly goes to voicemail mid-job. Speed-to-lead is life-or-death for them.
 3. The Outdoor & Property Services Owner (Landscaping / Hardscaping / Pools / Pest) — seasonal demand spikes, lots of one-off jobs that should become recurring, and a goldmine of past customers nobody reactivates.
 4. The Growth-Minded Local Business (Scaling past owner-operator) — already spending real money on ads, maybe has a small team, and is bottlenecked by lack of process and reporting. Wants control and visibility, not just leads.
 5. The Referral-Dependent Veteran — established, great reputation by word-of-mouth, but invisible online and terrified of becoming a "marketing person." Sees competitors with worse work winning on Google reviews and ads.
-

Primary Avatar

The Overworked Owner-Operator — skilled at the trade, stretched thin on everything else.

- Skilled and proud of the work. Their reputation with customers they actually reach is excellent. Quality isn't the problem.
- The bottleneck is themselves. They answer the phone, do the estimates, send the quotes, and follow up — when they remember. Everything routes through one overloaded person.

- Spending on ads, unsure what's working. They're running Facebook/Meta ads (or paying someone who is) but can't clearly trace dollars in to jobs out.
- Skeptical of agencies. They've been burned by "lead gen" promises, vanity dashboards, and tools they never figured out how to use. They want proof and simplicity.
- Time-poor, not tech-savvy. They will not learn five new apps. The solution has to be one place, on their phone, that just works.
- Growth-hungry but cautious. They want to grow without hiring a full office staff or living on the phone. They want a machine, not another job.

Primary Avatar Dream Outcome

The owner's dream is a business that grows without consuming their life — where they stay in the field doing the work they're good at, and the "front office" runs itself.

They picture a phone that's always answered (even when they can't), leads that get worked instantly whether it's noon or midnight, a calendar that fills with qualified, ready-to-buy appointments, and quotes that close because the follow-up never drops. They imagine a Google profile stacked with recent five-star reviews that makes them the obvious choice in their market. They want past customers coming back on their own and referrals flowing in, so that each new job costs less to win than the last.

Underneath it all is the real outcome: control and freedom. Knowing no opportunity is slipping through the cracks. Seeing exactly what every ad dollar produced. Being able to take a day off without the business stalling. Growing predictably instead of grinding harder. They want to feel like the owner of a real company with a real system — not a one-person operation held together by memory and hustle.

Primary Avatar Obstacles

(What's actually blocking the dream — organized by the leak each one represents. Use these as ad hooks, pain agitation, and discovery-call talking points.)

Capture leaks (opportunities never caught):

1. Missing calls while on a job or driving.
2. After-hours and weekend calls going to voicemail.
3. Voicemails that never get listened to in time.
4. Web leads sitting for hours before anyone responds.
5. Facebook leads coming in faster than they can be worked.
6. No 24/7 coverage — the business "closes" when they do.
7. Website visitors leaving because there's no instant chat.
8. Messages scattered across phone, Facebook, Instagram, and Google with no single inbox.
9. No retargeting, so warm traffic is paid for once and lost.

10. Only one lead channel (e.g., ads) with no organic/website pipeline.
11. Leads slipping out because a human has to be awake and available to catch them.

Convert leaks (caught leads that never become jobs): 12. No structured follow-up — leads get one attempt, then forgotten. 13. Quotes sent with no follow-up sequence; jobs die in silence. 14. Slow response time letting competitors win the first-responder advantage. 15. Web chats that end when the visitor closes the tab. 16. No qualification, so time is wasted on tire-kickers and bad-fit jobs. 17. No-show appointments from missing reminders and confirmations. 18. Relying on memory and sticky notes instead of a system. 19. Clunky quote/contract signing (printing, scanning, chasing signatures). 20. Different sales stages with no follow-up mapped to each. 21. The Facebook-lead-who-didn't-book getting no second path back. 22. No internal notifications, so the owner forgets to act in time. 23. No call notes or summaries, so context is lost between conversations. 24. Owner too busy to nurture leads through the middle of the funnel.

Compound leaks (finished jobs that never create more business): 25. Happy customers never asked for a review. 26. Negative experiences hitting Google publicly because there's no sentiment gate. 27. Reviews not responded to, signaling an inactive/uncaring business. 28. A thin or stale review profile losing the click to competitors. 29. Hundreds of past customers never contacted again. 30. No reactivation system for repeat and seasonal work. 31. No referral mechanism after a great job. 32. No reporting, so they can't see what's working or double down.

Personal / operational obstacles: 33. The owner is the single point of failure for everything. 34. Burnout from doing field work plus all the admin. 35. Distrust of agencies after past bad experiences. 36. Fear of complex software they'll never adopt. 37. A patchwork of disconnected tools that don't sync. 38. No clear ROI picture, so marketing feels like gambling. 39. Inconsistent growth — feast or famine. 40. Believing the only path to growth is "more leads" and a bigger budget.

Primary Avatar Bullets

("How we plug it" — each obstacle maps to a specific, named component of the C3 Growth System. This is the core message: every leak has a plug.)

Capture:

- How to answer every call 24/7 — the Voice Reception Agent picks up, qualifies, and books when you can't.
- How to instantly recover missed calls — automatic missed-call text-back on every one.
- How to respond to web and Facebook leads in seconds, not hours — the Conversation Agent engages immediately.
- How to capture after-hours demand — the system never sleeps, so neither does your front desk.

- How to stop paying for warm traffic once and losing it — retargeting built into your ad strategy.
- How to feed an organic pipeline — a custom website with chat widgets and estimate forms.
- How to stop juggling channels — one unified inbox for calls, texts, Facebook, Instagram, and Google messages.
- How to capture two kinds of demand — a volume lead-form funnel and a pre-qualifying quiz funnel that books straight onto your calendar.

Convert:

- How to make sure no lead dies in silence — multi-stage SMS + email follow-ups mapped to every sales stage.
- How to chase quotes automatically — structured follow-up until they sign or say no.
- How to keep web chats alive — web-chat-to-SMS continuation so the conversation survives a closed tab.
- How to qualify automatically — the Conversation Agent filters and books only the right jobs.
- How to cut no-show — automated reminders, confirmations, and reschedule flows.
- How to sign quotes on the spot — native in-app e-signature (no DocuSign, no extra tools).
- How to never forget to act — owner notifications across SMS, email, and the app.
- How to keep full context — call recording + AI call summaries written into each customer's notes.
- How to recover the lead who didn't book — a dedicated survey/follow-up path back into the funnel.

Compound:

- How to build a five-star reputation on autopilot — the Google Review Agent (one tap after a job fires the full request → sentiment-gate → reminder sequence).
- How to protect against public negatives — sentiment gating routes unhappy feedback privately first.
- How to look active and trusted — AI-drafted responses to reviews.
- How to re-book past customers — the Lead Reactivation Agent works your old list over SMS + email.
- How to know what's working — a full ROI / reporting dashboard inside the app.

The whole-business win:

- How to stop being the bottleneck — the system handles everything between "interested" and "paid."
- How to run it all from your phone — one synced Command Center, mobile + desktop.

- How to make growth cheaper over time — Compound turns every finished job into the next one.
-

Primary Avatar Offers

Hauck runs a three-call sales process: Intro → Demo → Launch. The "offer" maps to a front-end (the demo/audit experience that gets them in the door) and the core paid engagement (the system itself).

Front-End Offer: "The Leak Audit + Live Demo"

Summary: A no-pressure walkthrough where the owner sees exactly where their business is leaking leads — and watches the C3 Growth System catch, convert, and compound in real time.

What's inside:

- Leak Audit — a quick diagnostic of where opportunities are slipping (missed calls, slow response, no follow-up, thin reviews, dormant past customers).
- Live Command Center demo — a real look at the AI agents answering a call, working a lead, and firing a review request, branded as if it were their business.
- Custom growth plan — which leaks to plug first and the projected impact, framed in jobs and dollars, not features.
- Straight talk on fit — we tell them honestly whether this is right for them; we're a delivery-quality shop, not a churn mill.

Goal of the front end: make the invisible leaks visible, then show the closed loop working. The demo IS the proof.

Core Offer: The C3 Growth System (delivered as "[Their Business] Command Center")

Summary: A done-for-you, fully custom business app that becomes the operating system for the owner's company — built, branded to them, and launched on the Launch call.

What's inside (organized by the mechanism):

- CAPTURE — Two Meta ad funnels (volume lead form + pre-qualifying quiz that books onto the calendar), retargeting, a custom website with chat + estimate forms, the Voice Reception Agent (24/7 inbound), missed-call text-back, and a unified inbox.
- CONVERT — The fully custom synced app, the Conversation Agent (AI chat + SMS), complete multi-stage follow-ups, web-chat-to-SMS continuation, reminders/confirmations/reschedules, owner notifications, call recording + AI summaries, native e-signature, and in-app invoicing (Stripe/Square).

- COMPOUND — The Google Review Agent, the Lead Reactivation Agent, and a full ROI/reporting dashboard.
- The Command Center itself — branded to the client, synced mobile + desktop, so the app feels like theirs, not a rented tool.

Positioning note: do NOT call this a "CRM." A CRM is one feature of what we sell. This is the whole business, running in one place.

Primary Avatar Mechanism

The C3 Growth System — Capture → Convert → Compound.

The mechanism is the process, and every single deliverable maps to one of three alliterative steps. This is what makes the offer feel like a system instead of a feature list, and it's the engine of the whole sales story.

- Capture — Get every opportunity into one place. Nothing comes in that isn't caught: every call answered, every form worked, every channel funneled into one inbox.
- Convert — Turn caught leads into booked, sold jobs and let none slip. This is the heart of the system — where competitors leak and we don't — powered by the AI agent suite and relentless, automated follow-up. This is the wedge; weight the messaging here.
- Compound — Turn finished jobs into more business. Reviews feed rankings and ad performance; reactivation re-books past customers. The flywheel: each job makes the next one cheaper to win.

The hook that sits on top of the name:

"We make your growth leakproof — every lead caught, converted, and compounded."

Why it works: Capture and Compound are increasingly table stakes in the local-marketing world ("never miss a lead" is a crowded claim). The moat is completeness plus the named, weighted mechanism — plugging all the leaks in one synced loop, with Convert as the part competitors can't easily copy. Sell the closed loop, never "more leads."

Primary Avatar Guarantee

(Direction, not final legal language. The owner avatar is agency-burned and skeptical, so the guarantee must reverse risk and signal confidence in delivery — the real moat.)

The "Leakproof Guarantee" (concept):

We're confident enough in the system that we put the risk on us, not you. The framing should center on the thing they can actually feel and verify: no lead falls through the cracks. Possible structures to choose from on the offer call —

- Speed/coverage guarantee: Every inbound call answered and every lead engaged within a defined window (e.g., under 5 minutes), 24/7 — or we make it right.
- Build-and-launch guarantee: Your fully branded Command Center is built and live by an agreed launch date, or [defined remedy].
- Performance window: If, after launch and with ads running, the system isn't catching and working leads as promised within [X days], we keep working at no additional [defined cost] until it does.

Tone: "You're not buying a promise of more leads — you're buying a system that refuses to let the leads you already have leak out. We'll prove it works before you ever have to wonder." Keep claims tied to things inside our control (response speed, coverage, follow-up firing, build/launch) rather than guaranteeing revenue we can't control.

Have final guarantee language reviewed before it goes on the website or into contracts.

Primary Avatar Customer Journey

The journey mirrors the C3 mechanism and the three-call sales process. (Equivalent of the funnel diagram in the example brief.)

TRAFFIC

Meta / Facebook Ads

(volume lead form + quiz funnel)

|

CALL 1 | INTRO CALL |

| Qualify fit · surface the leaks |

|

CALL 2 | DEMO ("Leak Audit + Demo") |

| Show the closed loop working live; |

| branded Command Center walkthrough |

|

CALL 3 | LAUNCH |

| Build & deploy "[Business] Command Center" |

| Capture · Convert · Compound go live |

|

COMPOUND

Reviews + Reactivation flywheel →

each completed job lowers cost-per-job

(the ongoing relationship / retention layer)

- Traffic → Intro: Meta ads drive the leak narrative; the Intro call qualifies fit and makes the invisible leaks visible.
- Intro → Demo: The Demo is the conversion event — seeing the AI agents and Command Center work, branded to them, is the proof that closes.
- Demo → Launch: Build and deploy the system; the C3 loop goes live.
- Launch → Compound: This is where the relationship pays off long-term — reviews and reactivation make growth compound, which is also the quiet churn-protection (the app is theirs, and the results keep improving).

Positioning Guardrails (for everyone writing copy)

Keep every asset consistent with these strategic rules:

- Never sell "more leads." Sell the closed loop — caught, converted, compounded. "More leads" is a commodity price war.
 - Lean on completeness. "Never miss a lead" is common in this space; our moat is plugging all the leaks in one synced loop, plus the named mechanism.
 - Weight Step 2 (Convert). Capture and Compound are table stakes. Convert is the wedge — give it the most airtime.
 - Don't call it a CRM. It's the Command Center — the whole business runs there.
 - Brand the app to the client. "[Business] Command Center" makes it feel owned, not rented (churn protection).
 - Keep the AI genuinely "agent." For the Review and Reactivation agents, make sure real conversational AI is doing the work (drafting, handling replies) — not just timed sequences — so the "agent" label holds up to a sharp client.
 - Stay in our lane. Lane = lead → booked appointment → reputation. Do NOT position against full job-management/dispatch tools (Jobber, Housecall Pro, ServiceTitan). If a client uses one, we integrate — we don't compete.
 - Don't bloat the offer. Delivery quality is the real moat. Tier extras into "Advanced" rather than cramming the base.
-

One-Line Summary (elevator)

Hauck Marketing installs a leakproof growth system for local service businesses — a custom business app ("[Client] Command Center") that Captures every lead, Converts them into booked jobs with an AI agent suite, and Compounds finished jobs into reviews and repeat business — so the owner never misses an opportunity and their growth gets cheaper over time.